

Cake!

The short surprising history of our favourite bakes with social historian Dr Alysa Levene

"My sister had three wedding cakes... our grandmother, mother and step mother made their signature cakes. Our mother made a chocolate sponge which we called Auntie Queenie's chocolate cake, after the great aunt who gave her the recipe; it appeared at almost all of our birthdays in one guise or another. In our family, as in many others, these familiar cakes are the makers of memories." From the book itself.
